Some random thoughts by the pastor…

A practice that has become popular in the past twenty years or so is the devotion, adoration. Many find the devotion helpful. One unfortunate side-effect of the devotion, however, is the loss sense of community when we celebrate Eucharist. We can lose sight that it is 'when two or three are gathered in my name,' Jesus says, 'I am in their midst.' So, the importance of interacting with each other is bypassed with a private devotion that dismisses communal interaction, and can even cause anger that people are interacting and interrupting my devotion! Jesus celebrates (in our Gospel from Mark) with the disciples (his friends) a meal in which he places relational interaction as a priority. He demonstrates the communal nature of the meal when he uses words like 'poured out for you.' Jesus is sharing his experience of God who reveals complete vulnerability in being 'poured out' for us. It is this 'being poured out' that creates community: a relationship that develops because we completely trust the other. Ideally, this is Eucharist. God is good.

Parish Updates: The rectory will soon receive an update. The clapboards on the front of the house (and garage) quickly peels after paint is applied. A main culprit for this happening is the 'southern sun'. We have gone out to bid – as a result – to have front walls (only) on both the rectory and the garage be vinyl-sided.
